DESCRIPTION

Objectives: Beach Cleaning post Ganpati Visarjan

Key Takeaways:

On Saturday, 21st September 2024, a beach cleaning activity was organized at Danapani Beach to clear the waste left behind after the Ganpati Visarjan festivities. The initiative was led by the International Lions Club, and Atharva Institute of Management Studies (AIMS) was proud to participate in this noble cause, with second-year students representing the institution.

The day started with the students gathering at the beach, where they were welcomed by Mr. Sachin, a member of the Lions Club. He began by giving an insightful introduction, emphasizing the importance of beach cleanliness and the environmental impact of waste left on shores. He encouraged all participants to understand the significance of such activities and explained how regular efforts like this contribute to the larger goal of environmental conservation.

Following the introduction, the students and volunteers split into groups and began working diligently to clear the waste. With tools and equipment provided by the Lions Club, everyone aimed to clean as much of the beach as possible. After two hours of concentrated effort, a significant portion of the beach was cleared, though Mr. Sachin noted that the area still required more attention.

In his closing remarks, Mr. Sachin highlighted the importance of consistency, stating that while the two-hour effort was commendable, such activities need to be repeated regularly to ensure long-lasting cleanliness. He encouraged all volunteers to remain committed to this cause and make it a recurring practice, especially during and after festival seasons when waste levels are higher.

The beach cleaning activity was a great learning experience for all the students, as it not only allowed them to contribute to a meaningful cause but also raised awareness about environmental issues. Atharva Institute of Management Studies looks forward to participating in more such initiatives in the future.

Learning Outcomes: The event was a reminder that maintaining cleanliness in public spaces requires collective and consistent effort. It fostered a sense of responsibility and environmental awareness among the students and emphasized the importance of community involvement in keeping our surroundings clean.
